In his complaint Mr. Bach alleges that many of the statements in the company's prospectus, issued to induce investments in its stock, were questionable. One of these statements was that the company absolutely controlled the Tripler patents, whereas the company had only promised to pay Tripler $250,000 for his patents and a monthly salary of $1,000.

Bach alleges that after the prospectus was issued and the sale of stock begun, Cannon, Jones, Hoen, Dorsey and their associates made a liberal division of the company's stock, setting $1,000.

Transfer Clean-Up of Used PIANOS and ORGANS From the Mason & Hamlin Store

There is to be a memorable sharing of benefits between Wana-maker's and our public over the greatest musical trade transaction of the year. Perhaps the one point of least success about a conservative high-class piano store is the disposition of its used instruments. And in such a large, healthy, constantly growing business as that of Mason & Hamlin, on Fifth avenue, there was sure to be found an unusually large number of their own pianos and organs that had been out on rental for periods of varying lengths; as well as instruments of other makes taken in exchange for the superb Mason & Hamlin Pianos or Organs. Immediately upon the transfer of the stock to us, we began preparations for this-
